An empowering way to read for yourself when you need something

Write down what you think it is that you need. Whatever your question is. Now carefully consider if what you are asking is what you want to do with the money. For example, it is common to need extra cash. It makes sense to ask, "how can I earn more money?" Why do you need the cash? We need the cash for what it can buy for us. Here is a scenario. You need money—but actually what you need is a new car and the money is just what is needed for the energy exchange that is "give cash to get vehicle." So what you want to focus on here is the car. Just asking for money limits you. What if someone gives you a car, or you barter for it? And yes, you can win the lottery, or be gifted some money. You might come up with a brilliant idea to convert something you already have into cash which also may lead to a long-term solution to success. These cards are meant to give you solid prompts and actionable advice on how to act, feel, think and feel into the goal.

"I need [insert here]. Please advise me on exactly how to do this."

You can also say "I will [insert here]" "I will resolve [insert here] to get there."
